Washington, Feb. 10. — Ramsey's federal battery, an organization which distinguished itself at the battle of Gettysburg and other great combats in the civil war, has invited President Cleveland to attend a reunion of the battery which is to be held in St. Paul, Minn. next May. The invitation was forwarded the president by Representative Klutz of North Carolina. Klutz expressed his pleasure in being the honorarium, and said that whether or not they could be to be present.

Loom End and Job Lot Sale

Beginning Monday, February 13

No machine is so perfect that it does not damage goods in production, the damaged parts are cut off, and then we contract for the perfect ends. This is the history of the Loom End Sale at Long Bros.

FARMER'S HOUSE FOUND ON FIRE

Quick Action of Neighbors Save Home of New Bedford Man.

New Bedford, Feb. 10—The rest of Lorenzo Lower, a farmer living about four miles northwest of this place took fire Tuesday morning. The family had left home early in the morning, but fortunately the fire was discovered soon after starting. Albert Lowe, a near neighbor, succeeded in putting it out before damage had been done. The house, an enterprising farmer's home, was a fine structure. The family, including a young daughter, were safe.

able young lady of this community, were joined in marriage at the home of the groom's sister, Mrs. C. C. Fisher, last Sunday evening. The groom is certainly deserving of congratulations upon his choice of a helpmate, and the bride's many friends about here all join in extending to them their best wishes for a happy and prosperous journey through life.

Our band will give an oyster supper in the G. A. R. hall on Saturday evening, Feb. 18. Everybody is cordially invited to attend.

Milo Fly attended the teachers' examination at Coshocton last Saturday.

Dr. D. W. Shoemaker was summoned to appear before the grand jury at Millersburg as a witness last Tuesday.

Foraker Boomed For President

Republican Leaders Urging Candidacy of Ohio Man---Veterans Point Proudly To His War Record.

Washington, Feb. 10—Republican leaders outside of Ohio are quietly taking hold of Senator Foraker's boom for the presidential nomination in 1908, and by the time the convention is held the senator of Ohio is apt to be the leading candidate for this high honor. This movement is not encouraged by Senator Foraker but he is counseling delay to all of his friends Senator Foraker regards it too early to discuss the matter and has refused to say whether he will be a candidate.

The indifference of the Senator does not in the least stay the undercurrent which has set in for his candidacy. Political leaders from every state and congressmen when discussing presidential possibilities in variously mentioned the Senior Senator's name. There are many reasons why Senator Foraker is regarded as the most available candidate. To begin with it is agreed that the next presidential candidate must be a man of magnetic qualities. The rank and file of the Republican party will not be satisfied with the quiet conservative leader. The party won a magnificent victory last fall largely through the strong individuality and sterling Americanism of President Roosevelt and no candidate that has been mentioned so far complies with these requirements as fully as does Senator Foraker. He has always been a fearless fighter and dashing leader and on this account it is evident to the men high in the councils of the Republican party that Senator Foraker will appeal very strongly to the masses.

Another element of strength in Senator Foraker's candidacy is his war record. He will probably be the last soldier candidate to go before a Republican national convention. The veterans are rapidly passing that period of life at which they can bear the burdens of a political campaign. By 1912 there will be few soldiers of prominence in the late civil war who will be young enough to accept a presidential nomination even if it were tendered them.

As Senator Foraker enlisted a few days after he had passed his sixteenth birthday he is one of the youngest soldiers of the civil war. But even he has reached the age of 58 years and will be past the prime of life in 1912. The veterans realize this condition and will rally to his support.

44 SHEEP VICTIMS OF HUNGRY DOGS

Spring Mountain Farmer Loses Heavily From Blood-thirsty Canines.

WEST LAFAYETTE.

West Lafayette College, Feb. 10—Dr. Wells has returned from Dell Roy and has been quite sick ever since. He is just able to get to the college for his work.

During the absence of the president, Dr. S. S. Fisher conducted the services at morning chapel.

The literary societies which suspended their meetings during the revival services have again taken up their work and will hold their regular meetings hereafter on Thursday and Friday evenings.

Miss Hutchinson, the newly appointed matron of the ladies' boarding hall, has arrived and is giving splendid satisfaction.

Miss Leona Baird from Otsego has entered the class in instrumental music.

Miss Florence Moore is visiting her parents in Cambridge.

Mr. Temple, a former student, spent Sunday with friends here.

Mr. Thompson from New Alexandria, Ohio, was a recent guest of our friends.

position in the Newcomerstown pipe works.

Prof. Dickerson has returned from taking an advanced course at Oberlin and has again resumed his duties as head of the commercial department. The professor is fully up to date in all his methods and has put this department into better shape than ever.

Through the efforts of the pastor some of the college friends in the M. P. church have contributed the money to buy a set of microscopes for the use of the students, especially for the benefit of the classes in botany. This is one of the most interesting studies where pursued under a competent instructor such as we have here. One has only to follow the path back of the college into the woods upon the first warm days of spring to find a carpet of beautiful specimens, while every bud overhead bursts into a bouquet of lovely blossoms under the microscope.

DREAD OF HUMANITY

I am compelled by a sense of gratitude to tell you the great good your remedy has done me in a case of Contagious Blood Poison. Among other symptoms I was severely afflicted with Rheumatism, and got almost past going. The disease got a firm hold upon my system; my blood was thoroughly poisoned with the virus. I lost in weight, was run down, had sore throat, eruptions, spotsches and other evidences of the disease. I was truly in a bad shape when I began the use of S. S. S., but the persistent use of it brought me out of my trouble safe and sound, and I have the courage to publicly testify to the virtues of your great blood remedy, S. S. S., and to recommend it to all blood-poison sufferers, sincerely believing if it is taken according to directions, and given a fair trial, it will thoroughly eliminate every particle of the virus. JAMES CURRAN, Stark Hotel, Greensburg, Pa.

Painful swellings in the groins, red eruptions upon the skin, sores in the mouth and loss of hair and eyebrows, are some of the symptoms of this vile disease. S. S. S. is an antidote for the awful virus that attacks and destroys even the bones. S. S. S. contains no Mercury, Potash or other mineral ingredients. We offer $1,000 in proof that it is not absolutely vegetable. Name treatment must be given the symptoms of the disease. The remedy is sold by all druggists.

Mrs. Lew Howard is on the sick list.

Mr. D. H. Jones of Danville, Ill., is at the home of his brother Mr. L. L. Jones, he is confined to his bed with dropsy.

Mr. James Everhart of Coshocton is visiting friends here.

LITTLE ORPHAN BOY DIED AT EVANSBURG

Evansburg, Feb. 10—The little orphan boy lately adopted by Frank Richmond of this place and better known as "Little Tip" died at his home on North Main street, Thursday, Feb. 3, 1905 at 5 o'clock p. m. of epilepsy. His age was 10 years. The best medical aid obtainable was rendered but death resulted after only two hours suffering. He was of a kind and modest disposition and to know him was but to love him. He will be greatly missed in the home and immediate neighborhood. The family express their heartfelt thanks to the neighbors and friends who rendered their assistance and they have the sympathy of the entire community. Interment was made at the home cemetery at Evansburg.

At the Age of 114.
 Beaver Dam, Wis., Feb. 10 — Mrs. Mary Borwick of the town of Westford, near Beaver Dam, is dead at the age of 114 years. She was born in Poland.

Item 2. 42 sets of lock gates complete.

Item 3. 500 feet of 30-inch sewer pipe.

Item 4. 300,000 feet B. M. hard wood plank and timber delivered.

Item 5. White Oak Timber, cast and wrought iron and work for sluice gates, feeder gates, waste weirs, towing-path bridges and other minor structures, complete.

Item 6. Spikes, nails and drift belts delivered.

Item 7. Three steel or combination aqueducts, complete.

Item 8. One portable or traction engine, complete.

Item 9. Protection and rip rap stone delivered where required.

Item 10. Concrete work for lock walls, culverts and other structures, complete.

Item 11. Relaying lock walls and other walls.

Total estimated cost of work $75,000.00.

Specifications, plans, maps and sections of the work, instructions to bidders and blank forms of proposals can be obtained at the office of the State Board of Public Works, or at the Canal Office at Lock No. 1, Akron, Ohio, on or after the twenty-fifth (25th) day of January, 1905.

Each proposal must contain the full name of the party or parties making the same, and all persons interested therein, and must be accompanied by a certified check in the sum of $1,000.00 payable to the Secretary of the State Board of Public Works, as security that if the proposal is accepted, a contract will be entered into.

No proposal will be entertained unless made on blank proposals.

The proposals will be opened at 10 o'clock on the day specified.

ITS MENT IS PROVE

SECOND OF A GREAT MEDICINE

A Prominent Cincinnati Woman Tells How Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Completely Cured Her.

The great good Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is doing among the women of America is attracting the attention of many of our leading scientists, and thinking people generally.

The following letter is only one of many thousands which are on file in the Pinkham office, and go to prove beyond question that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound must be a remedy of great merit, otherwise it could not produce such marvelous results among sick and ailing women.

Dear Mrs. Pinkham:—
 "About nine months ago I was a great sufferer with womb trouble, which caused me severe pain, extreme nervousness and frequent headaches, from which the doctor failed to relieve me. I tried Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and within a short time felt better, and after taking five bottles of it I was entirely cured. I therefore heartily recommend your Compound as a splendid uterine tonic. It makes the monthly periods regular and without pain; and what a blessing it is to find such a remedy after so many doctors fail to help you. I am pleased to recommend it to all suffering women."—Mrs. Sara Wilson, 31 East 3d Street, Cincinnati, Ohio.

If you have suppressed or painful menstruation, weakness of the stomach, indigestion, bloating, leucorrhoea, flooding, nervous prostration, dizziness, faintness, "don't-care" and "want-to-be-left-alone" feeling, excitability, backache or the blues, these are sure indications of female weakness, some derangement of the uterus or ovarian trouble. In such cases there is one tried and true remedy—Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Where We Are Useful.
We are most particular about cleanliness in our houses—many servants must keep them swept and garnish for us—and about cleanliness in our food, eating only of first class materials, delicately prepared. But with all this delicacy of habit the most greasy sausage is scrupulously clean compared to us in the matter of air. He breathes pure air rich in oxygen. We get together in vast herds, duff the air with all manner of disagreeable and revolting odors, and breathe them in. We breathe the same air as the swine. We breathe the same air as the swine. We breathe the same air as the swine.

CHAPTER VII.
KARL STEINMETZ lifted his pen from the paper before him and scratched his forehead with his forefinger.
"Now, I wonder," he said aloud, "how many bushels there are in a ton. Ah, how am I to find out? These English weights and measures, these English money, when there is a metric system!"
He sat and hardly looked up when the clock struck 7. It was a quiet room this in which he sat, the library of Paul's London house. The noise of Piccadilly reached his ears as a faint roar not entirely unpleasant but so close and full of life. Accustomed as he was to the great silence of Russia, where sound seems lost in space, the hum of a crowded humanity was a pleasant change to this philosopher, who loved his kind while fully recognizing its little weaknesses.
While he sat there still wondering how many bushels of seed made a ton Paul Alexis came into the room. The younger man was in evening dress. He looked at the clock rather eagerly.
"Will you dine here?" he asked, and Steinmetz wheeled around in his chair. "I am going out to dinner," he explained further.
"Ah!" said the elder man.
"I am going to Mrs. Sydney Bamforth's. I shall probably ask her to marry me."
"And she will probably say yes," said Paul, with a laugh, for this man was without conceit. "I do not see why she should," he went on gravely. He was standing by the empty fireplace, a manly, upright figure, one who was not very clever, not brilliant at all, somewhat slow in his speech, but sure, deadly sure, in the honesty of his purpose.
Karl Steinmetz looked at him and smiled openly, with the quaint air of resignation that was his.
"You have never seen her, eh?" inquired Paul.
Steinmetz paused, then he told a lie, a good one, well told, deliberately.
"No."
"We are going to the opera, box F2. If you come in I shall have pleasure in introducing you. The sooner you know each other the better. I am sure you will approve."
"I think you ought to marry money," said Steinmetz.
"Why?"
"Oh," he answered, "because everybody does who can! There is Catrina Lanovitch—an estate as big as yours adjoining yours; a great Russian family, a good girl who is willing."
Paul laughed, a good wholesome laugh.
"You are inclined to exaggerate my manifold and obvious qualifications," he said. "Catrina is a very nice girl, but I do not think she would marry me even if I asked her."
"Which you do not intend to do," said Steinmetz.
"Certainly not."
"Then you will make an enemy of her," said Steinmetz quietly. "It may be inconvenient, but that cannot be helped. A woman scorned, you know. Shakespeare or the Bible, I always mix them up. No, Paul, Catrina Lanovitch is a dangerous enemy. She has been making love to you these last four years, and you would have seen it if you had not been a fool! I am afraid, my good Paul, you are a fool, God bless you for it!"
"I think you are wrong," said Paul rather curtly; "not about me being a fool, but about Catrina Lanovitch. If you are right, however, it only makes me dislike her instead of being perfectly indifferent to her."
His honest face flushed up finely, and he turned away to look at the clock again.
"I hate your way of talking about women, Steinmetz," he said. "You're a cynical old beast, you know."
"Heaven forbid, my dear prince! I admire all women—they are so clever, so innocent, so pure minded. Do not your English novels prove it. Your English stage, your newspapers, so high toned? Who supports the novelist, the playwright, the actor, who but your English ladies?"
"Better than being cooks, like your German ladies," retorted Paul stoutly.
"Better than being cooks," said Paul.
"I doubt it! I very much doubt it, my friend. At what time shall I present myself at box F2 this evening?"
"About 9—as soon as you like."
So Paul Howard Alexis sallied forth to seek the hand of the lady of his choice, and as he left his own door that lady was receiving Claude de Chauxville in her drawing room. The two had not met for some weeks—not indeed since Etta had told the Frenchman that she could not marry him. Her invitation to dine, couched in the usual friendly words, had been the first move in that game cynically called "bluff." Claude de Chauxville's acceptance of the same had been the second move. And these two persons, who were not afraid of each other, shook hands with a pleasant smile of greeting, while Paul Howard Alexis stood by, looking on with a keen interest.

"Forgiven for what?" she asked at length in that preoccupied tone of voice which tells wise men that only questions of dress will be considered.
De Chauxville shrugged his shoulders in his graceful Gallic way.
"Mon Dieu!" he exclaimed. "For a crime which requires no excuse and no explanation other than a mirror."
She looked up at him innocently.
"A mirror?"
"Tours. Have you forgiven me for falling in love with you? It is, I am told, a crime that women sometimes condone."
"It was no crime," she said. She had heard the wheels of Paul's carriage. "It was a misfortune. Please let us forget that it ever happened."
De Chauxville twirled his neat mustache, looking keenly at her while she said.
"You forget," he said. "But I will remember."
She did not answer, but turned with a smile to greet Paul.
"I think you know each other," she said gracefully when she had shaken hands, and the two men bowed. They were foreigners, he it understood. There were three languages in which they could understand each other with equal ease.
"Where is Maggie?" exclaimed Mrs. Bamforth. "She is always late."
"When I am here," reflected De Chauxville. But he did not say it.
Miss Delafield kept them waiting a few minutes, and during that time Etta Sydney Bamforth gave a very fine display of prowess with the double stringed bow. She had a smile and an epigram for Claude de Chauxville, a grave air of sympathetic interest in more serious affairs for Paul Alexis. She was bright and amusing, guileless and very worldly wise in the same breath—simple for Paul and a match for De Chauxville within the space of three seconds.
Paul was asked to take Mrs. Sydney Bamforth down to dinner by the lady herself.
"Mon ami," she said in a quiet aside to De Chauxville before making her request, "it is the first time the prince dines here."
She spoke in French, Maggie and Paul were talking together at the other end of the room. De Chauxville bowed in silence.
At dinner the conversation was necessarily general and as such is not worth reporting. No general conversation, one finds, is of much value when set down in black and white. It is not even grammatical nowadays. To be more correct, let us note that the talk lay between Etta and M. de Chauxville, who had a famous supply of epigrams and bright nothings delivered in such a way that they really sounded like wisdom. Etta was equal to him, sometimes capping his sharp wit, sometimes countering herself with silvery laughter. Maggie Delafield seemed rather abstracted, as De Chauxville noted. The girl's dislike for him was an iron that entered the quick of his vanity anew every time he saw her. There was no petulance in the aversion, such as he had perceived with other maidens who were only resenting a passing negligence or seeking to pique his curiosity. This was a steady and, if you will, unmanly aversion, which Maggie conscientiously attempted to conceal.
Maggie was by turns quite silent and very talkative. When Paul and Etta were speaking together she never looked at them, but fixedly at her own plate, at a decanter or a saltcellar. When she spoke she addressed her remarks, valueless enough in themselves, exclusively to the man she disliked, Claude de Chauxville.
There was something amiss in the pretty little room. There were shadows seated around that pretty little table beside the guests in their pretty dresses and their black coats silent, cold shadows who ate nothing, while they chilled the dainty food and took the sweetness from the succulent dishes. These shadows had crept in unawares to take their phantom places at the table, and only Etta seemed able to jostle hers aside and talk it down. She took the whole burden of the conversation upon her pretty shoulders and bore it through the little banquet with unerring skill and unflinching good humor.
Claude de Chauxville was for the moment forced to assume an humble role because he had no choice, Maggie Delafield was passive for the time being because that which would make her active was no more than a tiny seedling in her heart. The girl bid fair to be one of those women who develop late, who ripen slowly, like the best fruit.
During the drive to the opera house the two women in Etta's snug little brougham were silent. Etta had her thoughts to occupy her. She was at the crucial point of a difficult game. She could not afford to allow even a friend to see so much as the corners of the cards she held.
In the luxurious box it was easily enough arranged—Etta and Paul together in front, De Chauxville and Maggie at the other corner of the box.
"I have a friend," said Karl Steinmetz, to Claude de Chauxville, who was seated next him.

Etta smiled graciously.
"It is kind of him," she answered, "to be anxious to make my acquaintance."
She was apparently listening to the music. In reality she was hurrying back mentally over half a dozen years. She had never had much to do with the stout German philosopher, but she knew enough of him to scorn the faint hope that he might have forgotten her name and her individuality. Etta Bamforth had never been disconcerted in her life yet. This incident came very near to bringing about the catastrophe.
"At what time," she asked, "is he coming in?"
"About half past 9."
It was a race, and Etta won it. She had only half an hour. De Chauxville was there, and Maggie, with her quiet, honest eyes. But the widow of Sydney Bamforth made Paul ask her to be his wife, and she promised to give him his answer later. She did it despite a thousand difficulties and more than one danger—accomplished it with, as the sporting people say, plenty to spare—before the door behind them was opened by the attendant, and Karl Steinmetz, burly, humorously imperturbable and impenetrable, stood smiling gravely on the situation.
He saw Claude de Chauxville, and before the Frenchman had turned round the expression on Steinmetz's large and placid countenance had changed from the self-consciousness usually preceding an introduction to one of a dim recognition.
"I have had the pleasure of meeting madame somewhere before. I think, in St. Petersburg, was it not?"
Etta, composed and smiling, said that it was so and introduced him to Maggie. De Chauxville took the opportunity of leaving that young lady's side and placing himself near enough to Paul and Etta to completely frustrate any further attempts at confidential conversation.
For a moment Steinmetz and Paul were left standing together.
"I have had a telegram," said Steinmetz in Russian. "We must go back to Tver. There is cholera again. When can you come?"
Beneath his heavy mustache Paul bit his lip.
"In three days," he answered.
"True? You will come with me?" inquired Steinmetz under cover of the chiding music.
"Of course."
Steinmetz looked at him curiously. He glanced toward Etta, but he said nothing.
CHAPTER VIII.
THE season wore on to its perihelion, a period, the scientific books advise us, of the highest clang and crash of speed and whirl, of the greatest brilliancy and deepest glow of a planet's existence. The business of life, the pursuit of pleasure and the scientific demolition of our common enemy, time, received all the care which such matters require.
Amid the whirl of rout and ball and picnic, race meeting, polo match and what not, Paul Howard Alexis stalked misunderstood, distrusted; an object of ridicule to some, of pity to others, of impatience to all; a man, if it please you, with a purpose—a purpose at the latter end of the nineteenth century, when most of us, having decided that there is no future, take it upon ourselves to despise the present.
Paul soon discovered that he was found out, at no time a pleasant condition of things except indeed when callers are about. That which Etta and Cambridge had failed to lay their fingers upon, every minute making mother had found out for herself in a week.
But Paul was at once too simple and too clever for matron and maid alike—too simple because he failed to understand the inner meaning of many pleasant things that the guileless fair one said to him, too clever because he met the subtle matron with the only arm she feared, a perfect honesty. And when at last he obtained his answer from the coy and hesitating Etta there was no gossip in London who could put forward a just cause or impediment.
Etta gave him the answer one evening at the house of a mutual friend.

"Yes, I have my answer ready," where a multitude of guests had assembled ostensibly to hear certain celebrated singers, apparently to whisper recriminations on their entertainer's cheapness. It was a dull business—except indeed for Paul Howard Alexis. As for the lady—the only lady his host, simple world contained—who shall say? Inwardly she may have been thinking of him, in brotherhood, in friendship, in love, in hate, in admiration, in contempt, in pity, in scorn, in sympathy, in knowledge.

due to the fact that she desired to shield her daughter Mary, and that to spare the daughter she shifted the blame to Greason.

Mary Edwards the daughter, was tried for complicity in the murder, but was acquitted. After her acquittal she went to St. Louis to live. It is said that an affidavit has been received from Miss Edwards. This affidavit, which, it is claimed, is now in the hands of John Rothermel, counsel for Greason, is as follows: "I wish to state I was very angry at Samuel Greason for what he did to my mother, but he had nothing to do with the killing of my father that I know of, and therefore he should not be hanged for that crime. I certainly wish they would not hang my mother."

Mrs. Annie Kutz of this city, also made an affidavit, in which she asserts that after Mary Edwards had been acquitted she informed her (Mrs. Kutz) that her mother had struck her father on the head while he lay drunk, causing his death; that she (Mary) was present at the time; that Greason was not there, and that her story in court about Greason was not true.

Miss Edwards' Denial.

St. Louis, Feb. 10.—Miss Mary Edwards, daughter of Mrs. Kate Edwards, who is under sentence of death at Reading, Pa., for the murder of her husband, John Edwards, repudiated the statement which the counsel of Samuel Greason, alleged accomplice of Mrs. Edwards, holds to use in behalf of Greason, and which is purported to have been made by her and is favorable to Greason.

MURDER

One of them, Mrs. Emilie Fischer Hoch, saw him for a minute and saluted him with the exclamation, "You old hog, you got my $750, didn't you?" Hoch made no reply to this, but smiled as though he considered the affair of $750 rather a joke than otherwise. Later the five women were, one at a time, admitted into the office of the inspector, and all of them identified Hoch as the man to whom they were married.

Mrs. Ellen Hoppe at first declared that she had married Hoch, but later said she was not sure about it. Inspector Shippy asked: "Hoch, did you marry this woman?"

"No," replied Hoch, "but maybe I will, if you don't hustle her out of here pretty quick."

Mrs. Mary Rankin-Hoch, who admitted last week that she had committed bigamy when she married Hoch, was repudiated in strong terms by the prisoner. He declared that he had not married her, and had never seen her before.

When Mrs. Marie Goerk-Hoch was admitted into the room, Hoch for the second time declared that he married her, but that the marriage was illegal. He also confessed to having married Mrs. Emily Fischer-Hoch when she was shown into the room.

A physician who had attended Mrs. Walcker-Hoch, the last wife of Hoch, identified him as the husband of Mrs. Walcker and showed him a bill for $100 for attendance upon the woman. "Oh, yes," said Hoch, "I remember something about that. Bring it around in the morning; I'll still be here," and he laughed heartily at this joke. Hoch confessed nothing of any murder.

Just before the close of the examination Hoch confessed that he had married 10 women. Hoch also admitted that he had intended to commit suicide and that the white powder found in a fountain pen taken from his room in New York city was arsenic, which he had purchased with the intention of killing himself.

The names of two of the women married by Hoch were not disclosed by the police. The other eight were: Mrs. Julia Steinhilber, married in 1894; Mrs. Julia Marie Walcker, married Dec. 12, 1904; Mrs. Mary Becker, St. Louis; Mrs. Anna Hendricks, married in Hammond, Ind., Jan. 2, 1902; Mrs. Marie Goerk, married in 1901; Mrs. Mary Rankin, married in 1894; Mrs. Martha Horddeldt, now of Pasadena, Cal., married in 1895; Mrs. Emilie Fischer, married in December, 1904.

A THRIFTY TENOR.

Imagined Walked, but His Carriage Bill Had to be Paid.

Several years ago a tenor named Tamagno was engaged to come to America and sing at the Metropolitan Opera House, New York. He was paid $1,000 a night. This is a sum which would make many people willing to put up with small extra expenses. But not so Tamagno. Before leaving Europe he made a stipulation that he be furnished with a carriage to and from the opera house every night. This was inserted in the contract.

When he arrived he found a carriage waiting at the pier. He rode uptown—always at the expense of the opera company—and took a look around. Then he decided to put up at the Marlborough hotel, which happens to be only three short blocks from the Metropolitan Opera House. Every time he sang he walked up to the opera house, refusing to take a carriage. He said he had just as soon walk. When it came time for him to return to Europe he presented a bill for over $200 "for carriages to and from the opera."

"But you didn't take a carriage," said the manager of the opera company.

Tamagno bowed low and invited the manager to look at the contract. He repeated the same suggestion whenever anything was said about it. The result, of course, was that the $200 had to be paid. He stood out for it with as much insistence as if he hadn't seen a dollar for a month, and all the time he was getting $1,000 a night.

THE STARFISH.

This Peculiar Creature Can Neither See, Hear Nor Smell.

Unlike man, the starfish which loses one of its "arms," or properly its rays, grows a new one to take its place. Under certain conditions it grows two to take the place of one. A starfish may lose all its rays without losing its life, and very often a cripple with but a single ray left is found by fishermen and collectors. When completely broken in two the starfish becomes two distinct fish, and the growing process continues. The brittle starfish, it is believed, in many instances breaks off its own rays at the approach of danger. For this reason it is difficult to obtain a perfect specimen.

A starfish can neither see nor hear. Neither has it the sense of smell. In spite of these seeming impediments, nevertheless, it seeks and devours its prey as nimbly as an ordinary fish. The starfish lies upon its prey and folds its "arms," or rays, completely about it. Then it pushes its stomach out through its mouth and will wrap even a large oyster and crawl within the folds of the stomach. The mouth of the starfish is

HORSE SALE ATTRACTED BIG CROWD OF BUYERS

The sale conducted by John Adams at his barn Thursday afternoon was a very satisfactory one and Mr. Adams states that the horses brought fair prices. Probably three hundred people attended the sale from all parts of Coshocton county and not a few were present from adjoining towns.

The prices ranged from $125 to $210 but a few commissioned horses sold for about eighty dollars. Joseph Porteus who lives south of town brought the highest price horse at the sale. It was a large draft horse and sold for $210.

W. M. Smith, of this city, purchased the beautiful black horse, which was admired by so many, for $200 and refused five hundred dollars for his bargain before he left the barn. A man from Freeport bought a brown beauty for $200. Judge Ben-ter, of Dundee took home a fine mare for $155. J. Bond of Freeport, purchased five head and Frank Porter of Keene, bought a three year old registered draft mare for $165.

Jay Wood had three horses in the sale. One of them, a fine hackney horse, was sold to Ham Leland, of Zanesville, for $175, another a bay driver, went to Peter Goudy of Strasburg, for $172.50 and the third a sorrel trotter, was purchased by C. S. Wood of Wakatomika, for $149.

Other horsemen who attended the sale not a few of whom purchased horses were John eBar and A. C. Jones of Winfield, V. D. Hughes of New Philadelphia; Stephen Lisle, John Crooks and Frank Shaw, of Zanesville; Finley Fleming, J. W. Blizard and James Frazer of Frazeyburg; Ellis Jones and Thomass Lippincott, of Newark; John Seiler, of Baltic; Creighton Norman of Newcometown. E. H. Moore of Uhrichsville.

Fred Andrews of Sugar Creek was the auctioneer and E. H. Wilson of this city was clerk.

PREACHER NOT NEXT TO WAYS OF A HORSE-FAIR

A joke is told on Rev. J. W. Wright of Willow Brook, in connection with J. M. Adams' horse sale Thursday. Mr. Wright had consigned a horse to Mr. Adams to sell. The animal was put up and Auctioneer Andrews knocked it off to the highest bidder. The gentleman who had purchased the horse went around to pay for it and lead it home. But lo! the horse had disappeared. It seems Rev. Wright had listened to the bidding and decided that his horse sold too low. Accordingly he quietly went around to the stall and led the horse away. It is possible that Rev. Wright did not understand the true situation but at any rate a laugh is going the rounds among local horsemen.

Friday morning Mr. Adams communicated with Rev. Wright who said he expected the horse to bring fifty dollars and he refused to sell him for less. Mr. Adams paid the purchaser fifteen dollars and the sale was called off.

Secret Twelve.
The Secret Twelve were entertained on Thursday evening by Mrs. Higgins of Walnut street. Pinocle was played and the royal prize was won by Mrs. Hoffheim and the consolation by Mrs. Jennie Denzer.
The first one was a half dozen dainty dollies and the second one equally dainty one.
Delicious refreshments were served.

Sunday School Entertained.
The losing side of Miss Yocum's Sunday school class of Grace church entertained the winners on Thursday evening at the home of Mrs. Selena Dunlap on Chestnut street.
Two guessing contests made the evening a happy one: the first concerned the many things which can be found on one copper cent the first prize being won by Miss Nellie Mercer and the consolation by Miss Randles. In the other Miss Mabel Porter had the most accurate eye for the number of diminutive candies in a glass bottle. She was given the candy for her superior skill and Miss Mercer won a plate. Refreshments were served.

Election of Officers.
The Woman's Missionary society of the M. P. church held their annual election of officers on Thursday evening at the home of Miss Fannie Marshall on South Seventh street. Miss Marshall and Miss Ida Stafford were again chosen president and secretary and the other officers are:
First vice president, Miss Bessie Browning.
Second vice president, Mrs. Howard Hahn.
Third vice president, Mrs. Timmons.
Treasurer, Miss Mollie Stafford.
Mrs. Hahn, Miss Browning and Miss Schwab were appointed a committee to arrange the program and the old visiting committee was re-appointed.

The society is in an excellent condition and is anticipating a profitable year's work.
The next meeting will be held Thursday March the ninth with Miss Sue Wells.

Entertained at Cards.
Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Smith of South Fourth street entertained about forty of their friends on Thursday evening at cards. The game was pinocle, the prizes a china plate and a paper knife were won by Miss Etta McCoy and Mr. J. J. Rose. Mrs. McCoy shared the honors of having the greatest number of progressions with Mrs. Hanley and Mrs. Ball. Mrs. Smith was assisted by Mrs. Joseph Johnson and the delicious supper was served by Miss Jennie Smith, Virginia Hanley, Anne Anderson, Joseph Pope and Edith Johnson.

J. G. T. Club.
The girls of the J. G. T. club, as well as a number of guests, enjoyed their fortnightly game of pinocle with Miss May Deaman on Thursday evening. Mrs. Harry Hunt, Mrs. Clifton Beach, Mrs. Ernest Smith, Miss Kate Temple and Miss Winifred Hanlon scored the same number of progressions and upon a cut the pretty china plate which was the prize was given Mrs. Hunt. Delicious refreshments were served.

Miss Clara Felver delightfully entertained a number of her friends at her home on Sycamore street Thursday evening in honor of Miss Florence Klingler who leaves Sunday for Akron to make a visit of several weeks. The evening was spent playing cards and other games and light refreshments were served.

Mrs. James Preston of South Fourth street whose card party of a week or so ago was such a delightful affair, entertained about thirty ladies on Thursday afternoon with a thimble party. The afternoon was given over to sewing and at five o'clock a delicious two course supper was served.

A theatre party composed of the following young ladies will witness "Miss Bob White" this evening: Misses Anna McCarton, Lou Meek, Sue Manning, Coral Walter, Agnes Carton and Miss Mary Gilhooly, of Roncefort, W. Va.

The stock at the Rummage Sale is constantly being augmented with fresh supplies and the ladies are so pleased with the success which has already crowned their efforts that they have decided to continue the sale over in to next week. Instead of Saturday being the last day it will be conducted until ten o'clock Monday evening.

District No. 4, of the Grace M. E. Church, held one of the best meetings of the season with Mrs. O. J. Neldon on South Lawn avenue Thursday evening. There was a large attendance of the members present. The guests of the evening were Mrs. Dr. Neldon, Mrs. U. J. Neldon and daughter Mayme, and Mrs. Dilla.

In addition to the regular business committees were appointed to arrange for the annual church supper to be held the 23d of February.
Several selections of music were rendered by Miss Neldon. Light refreshments were served by the hostess, Mrs. O. J. Neldon.

Mr. and Mrs. O. B. Jones entertained a small company of friends on Thursday evening in a very enjoyable manner. Miss Jennie Ferguson won a pretty calendar for her superior skill in the guessing contest and music and dainty refreshments completed the evening.

The W. C. T. U. met on Thursday afternoon with Mrs. William Wright on Walnut street and in the absence of Mrs. B. A. McGinnis, who was to lead the meeting, Mrs. Timmons took charge.
The only paper of the afternoon was by Mrs. L. E. Baughman who discussed the many phases of Miss Frances Willard's life and the immense amount of work she has done along temperance lines. At the conclusion of this the union adjourned to meet February the twenty third with Mrs. St. Clair on South fourth street. Mrs. Cantwell will be the leader.

BOB WHITE CO. A BIG ONE

The "Miss Bob White" company came in on the T. W. V. & C. road from Cambridge this morning and have taken up their quarters at the Stag, the Standen, the Park and the Mecca hotels. If anything can be judged from appearances the theatre tonight will be good. A nice looking aggregation of theatrical people could scarcely be wished and many of them bear the marks of true actors. The company will leave tonight at 2:25 on a special Pullman for Steubenville where they play Saturday night.

PERRY BURT AT ENAMEL COMPANY

The Enamel plant at West Lafayette has a new manager in the person of Perry Burt, a well known business man of that place. Mr. Burt and his brother Roe recently sold their grocery business to the new firm of Hiram Bell and Noah McClain, who have taken charge. Roe Burt has not yet decided what line he will enter. The store was inventoried by D. G. Whittemore of Keene and J. H. Platt of Plainfield.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

Pepys' Furnace.
An electric resistance furnace was used by Pepys in 1815 for the cementation of iron. He took a piece of pure soft iron and cut a slit along its length. The slit was filled with diamond dust, which was prevented from falling out by fine iron wire. The portion of the wire containing the dust was wrapped in mica. The wire thus charged was heated quickly to redness by the current from a battery. On opening the wire Pepys found that the diamond dust had disappeared and that around where it had been the wire had been converted to steel.—London Engineer.

Picture in Disguise.
Many and strange have been the vicissitudes of some of the world's greatest pictures, and a fine painting which now graces Lord Leigh's residence in Warwickshire has an interesting history. This remarkable picture, which for some years consisted of a painting of flowers, was pronounced by an art dealer to be merely a mask for some other picture, and on his receiving permission he gradually cleaned off a very fine portrait of Charles I. by Vandyke. It is supposed that the portrait was thus disguised in order to save it from destruction by the Roundheads at the time of the commonwealth.

AMUSEMENTS

Coming Attractions.

Friday, Feb. 10—Miss Bob White. Thursday, Feb. 16—Under South- ern Skies. Coming soon—Field's Big Min- trels.

Boosts Bob White.

The Zanesville Times Recorder has the following to say about Miss Bob White which is the attraction at the Sixth Street theatre tonight. "It appeared at the Weller Wednesday evening, coming here from Cam- bridge.

Weller's opera house was packed last night with an appreciative audi- ence who witnessed a charming pro- duction of Miss Bob White which has been here several times before. There is a charming undercurrent in the play which appeals to one's finer feelings. There is nothing coarse about the entire production, and one leaves with the definite im- pression that he has spent a deligh- tful evening. That this is true is evi- denced by the large crowd. The show is a familiar one with Zanesville theatre-goers, and they would not have attended in such large numbers to delight an audience. Beautiful southern melodies are introduced throughout the play with great ef- fect. The story of the play is both strong and interesting and is re- lieved with much comedy which is contributed by the darky servants and by their masters and mistresses who are of the southern aristocracy. "Under Southern Skies" is one of the big successes of recent years and no one who enjoys a first class play, presented in a first class man- ner, should fail to see "Under Southern Skies" at the Sixth Street theatre on Thursday, Feb. 16.

He Shot Them.

Mr. Willard Spenser, the author and composer of "Princess Bonnie," "The Little Tycoon" and "Miss Bob White," is an enthusiastic fisherman and hunter. Not many seasons ago he introduced an English friend to the delights of quail shooting in Monroe county, Pa.

After tramping for about an hour through the stubble fields and under- brush, a large covey was started. The Briton, who was not much of a nimrod, was so startled by the had not the show a good reputation. The two comedians, millionaires in the guise of tramps, by reason of an election bot, were remarkably good. Miss Phelps has a charming manner, and a good voice. The entire show made a favorable impression and the production will remain a pleasant memory in the minds of the spectators.

Under Southern Skies.

The appearance of Lottie Blair Parker's delightful play, "Under Southern Skies" is an event that should be looked forward to with interest by our theatre goers.

The company is a large one, num- bering twenty-seven people. The scenery is beautiful, everything used in the representation, being carried by the company. The costumes are of airy summery stuffs, made in the fashion of 1875 which is the period of the play. A Halloween celebration during which a pumpkin dance is in- troduced, is one of the lively features of the performance, and never fails whit of innumerable wings that he forgot he had a gun in hands.

Not so with Mr. Spenser. With a clever right and left he dropped two fat juicy birds.

"Ah," said he, "We'll eat Bob White today."

"I say, old chap," said his majes- ty's subject, "do you call those birds Bob White?"

"You Americans are a jolly funny lot," said John Bull, "Fancy calling a quail Bob White when he's not white at all, you know."

Statehood Bill.

Washington, Feb. 10.—A caucus of Republican members of the house has been called to consider the statehood bill as amended by the senate. The call was signed largely by those who favor the provisions of the statehood bill as it passed the house, and who are opposed to accepting the senate bill. The binding force of the caucus will be left to the individual preference of each member participating.

Charge Against Gorky.

St. Petersburg, Feb. 10.—Absolute secrecy is still maintained regarding the exact nature of the charge against Novelist Gorky, but it is believed that it is an alleged attempt to induce troops to mutiny and to stir up a revolt of workmen. It has not yet been de- cided whether he will be tried by a military or a civil court, but it is prac- tically certain that the charges against him do not involve the death penalty.

Fired on a Mob.

Sosnovice, Feb. 10.—Strikers at- tacked the workers in the electric sta- tion. Troops fired from the windows of the plant, wounding many people. The situation here is much disturbed, but the military force is sufficient to awe rioters. Eight battalions of in- fantry, eight squadrons of cavalry and one regiment of Cossacks are now in the town.

Governor General Dead.

London, Feb. 10.—Special dispatches from Warsaw report the death of Gov- ernor General Tcheretkoff of the prov- ince of Warsaw, who was wounded in the leg in a recent encounter between troops and strikers.

Witte's Liberal Policy.

St. Petersburg, Feb. 10.—M. Witte's policy favoring the widest discussion of the reforms is giving the greatest satisfaction. It is understood that Privy Councillor Kobeko will summon a conference of editors before proceed- ing to discuss the press reforms, and the metropolitan of St. Petersburg is con- voking ministers of all creeds prior to the consideration by special com- mittee of the point in Emperor Nich- olas' ukase dealing with religious tol- erance. This liberality and energy dis- played by M. Witte in directing the whole question of reforms has startled the reactionaries.

Battle Imminent.

Tokyo, Feb. 10.—The impression pre- vails here that the impending battle between the armies of Field Marshal Oyama and General Kuropatkin will occur before any material thaw takes place, which would convert the coun- try into a slushy bog and render the movement of guns, ammunition and stores impossible until the roads harden. The Russians are entrenching and continuing their bombardment in the direction of the Shakhe river.

CURES WITHOUT STOMACH DOSING

Hyomei Cures Catarrh by Simple Breathing. C. E. Anderson Refunds the Money if it Fails to Cure.

A long stride toward solving the mystery of curing catarrh was taken with the discovery of Hyomei. In fact, the percentage of cures by this treatment proves it equal to the final tests.

The folly of taking medicine into the stomach to cure catarrh of the nose, throat and lungs, has been realized by physicians, but not until Hy- omei was known, had they a practical method that would obviate stomach dragging.

A complete Hyomei outfit costs but $1, and consists of a neat pocket in- haler that can be used anywhere without attracting attention, a med- icine dropper and a bottle of Hy- omei. Extra bottles of Hyomei cost but 50c.

Breathing Hyomei through the in- haler, every particle of air that en- ters the nose, throat and lungs, is charged with a healing balsam that soothes and allays all irritation, kills the catarrhal germs and embibes the blood with additional ozone.

C. E. Anderson has so much faith in the power of Hyomei to cure cat- arrh, that he is selling it under his personal guarantee to refund the money if it does not give positive relief.

the regimental numbers on the uni- forms of the Japanese killed during the engagements with General Kuropatkin's forces. According to this report General Kuropatkin, commanding the Japanese right, has 76 battalions, 11 squadrons and 506 guns, besides 70 to 80 reserve battalions. General Nodzu, commanding the center, has 60 bat- talions, 6 squadrons and 193 guns, or 65,000 men. General Oku, commanding the left, including General Nogai's forces, has 98 battalions, 23 squadrons and 342 guns, or 110,000 men. The number of reserves with Generals Nodzu and Oku is unknown. The total of Field Marshal Oyama's regular troops is placed at 265,000 cavalry and in- fantry and 850 guns. The total number of reservists is probably 100,000. Military men estimate General Kuropatkin's superiority at about 50,000 men.

NEW YORK FASHIONS

Pattern For Girl's Frock Designed by Martha Dean

In the charming little frock shown here we have the box plaited style and the Russian closing, two features that con- tinue in vogue for young girls. The reason for their popularity is not far to seek —the Russian style is most becoming and the box plaits give a charm to dresses not obtained by the use of tucks and ruffles. The model here is very quaint, reminding one of the linen blouses that were once in vogue for older people. The double breasted front is outlined by a narrow backward turning tuck and has a rather wide box plait on either side. The back is made with a side body, which al- lows more width to the skirt than can be put in unless a seam is used, for, as a mother knows, a girl's shoulders are quite narrow, and there is only a small space in which to lay plaits that cannot overlap, and this same fullness is about all that can be put into the lower edge of skirt, as the shaping of the underarm seam does not throw the fullness where it is needed. The back is fitted by a draw- string in a casing at the waist line, the advantage of which is soon demonstrated in the laundering, as then the draw- string is loosened. The mode is adapted to all materials suitable for children's wear. The matter of trimming is optional, machine stitching in coarse thread being as pretty in effect as embroidery.

MORE COSHOCTON HUNTERS LANDED BY SAME SLEUTH

Thomas Crowley and William West were taken to Zanesville by Deputy Game Warden Lloyd Wine Friday and Archie Thompson. Fred Smith and William Robertson will follow tomorrow morning to answer to the charge of illegal hunting on November 14.

The Adamsville game detective evidently has formed a determination to cause trouble for as many Coshocton sportsmen as he can. It was through his efforts that fines were paid by J. P. Zerbe, and Tunis Elson and that suits are still pending in Squire Green's court against Charles Waddel and Will Robertson. The boys left Coshocton November 11 for Adamsville but they state they were guilty of no violations on that day.

HARP ORCHESTRA HAS BUSY TIME

One of the most popular musical organizations of Coshocton, or for that matter of this part of the state, is the City Harp Orchestra of this city. It is composed of Coshocton young men with whom music is a natural talent and their ability is amply attested by their popularity. They have seven engagements for this month, and that is "going some" when it is considered that their orchestra work is simply a side line and diversion.

Tuesday night, the evening of St. Valentine's day, they go to Dresden to play for the big Valentine masquerade ball of the Twentieth Century Club.

The members of the orchestra are Violin, Virgil Loos Clarinet, Edward Snyder.
Cornet, Charles Hull
Trombone, Joseph Johnson.
Harp, John Palmer.
Trap drums, Walter Moore.

ROOF GARDEN A SURE GO

The Coshocton Realty company at their meeting Thursday night determined to go on with their new building opposite the court house as soon as the weather opens and decided to make a roof garden on top of it for the tenants' use. The building will be made with brick walls throughout, making it substantially fireproof and deadening sound.

The gentlemen wired Architect Richard Doesen of Columbus, who prepared the clever plans for the building to come over Saturday morning and a conference will be held with him at 99 a. m.

They held their annual business meeting electing the following directors:

E. O. Selby, M. Q. Baker, H. L. Richardson, H. R. McCurdy and T. L. Montgomery who in turn elected the following officers:

President, H. R. McCurdy.
Vice president, T. L. Montgomery.
Secretary, H. L. Richardson.
Treasurer, E. O. Selby.
